

Thank you for taking the Pledge

Thank you, comrade.

By taking this pledge, you have stood with history's wounded and with humanity's future. From Manipur to Bhima Koregaon, you have raised your voice against the everyday barbarity inflicted on Dalits and Adivasis. From Hathras and Unnao to Sandeshkhali and RG Kar, you have refused silence in the face of violence against women. From Gurgaon to Odisha, you have affirmed dignity for migrant workers whose labour sustains the nation yet whose lives are made precarious. From Graham Staines and Akhlaq to Dipu Das, you have stood against hatred and persecution of religious minorities, here and across the world. From Bamiyan, Babri, Thakurgaon, you have rejected the politics of religious violence and destruction. From Shalku Soren to Tamanna, you have opposed the cruelty of political vengeance. This pledge is not merely words—it is a commitment to resistance, solidarity, and justice. It reminds us that remembrance is resistance, and courage is collective.

We thank you for choosing empathy over indifference, justice over fear, and solidarity over silence.

Revolutionary greetings to you all.
Lal Salaam. Inquilab Zindabad.
